ENJOYED

Letter of Mr. Moreman on Woman's Suffrage.

But is Opposed to Women Voting—Our Dry Ridge Correspondent Writes Good News Letter.

Dry Ridge, Nov. 7.—Mr. Moreman's letter on Woman's Suffrage was fine. I enjoyed every word of it. I should also have enjoyed seeing and hearing the notable women at their convention held in Louisville so recently, but like some men who want to be excused from service as jurymen, I have formed an unchangeable opinion, and neither Mr. Moreman's splendid, amusing article, nor the suffragette's plausible arguments could make me think other than that a line has been clearly drawn, dividing the work and duties of men and women, and that the voting falls on the man's side.

Fine Crop of Potatoes.

M. G. Boston raised nearly eleven barrels of large, smooth second-crop potatoes from one bushel of seed potatoes—the largest potatoes and the largest yield for the same amount of ground planted that he ever had. Glad to know that our good neighbor, Emmett Davis, also raised such fine ones, as last week's paper reported.

Road Nail in Foot.

Miss Elizabeth Neal, our largest school girl, was so unfortunate as to step on a rusty nail, which penetrated the shoe sole and her foot, causing a very painful sore. This happened Saturday afternoon but her energy and ambition would not let her remain idle, so she is coming to school with her swollen foot and we hope she will have no serious trouble with it.

May Be a Wedding.

Like A. B. C., we could grow mysterious and say a number of things to be going on that we don't like to mention. Yet, one of our unmarried men seems very anxious to have the doors of his home papered at once. Maybe it would mean anything, but.... And another one has been making his visits so long and so regularly that.... Well, if we don't have some marriages and births and other things to report before very long, it will surprise us—that's all.

Aged Couple Married.

Recently a Mr. Tennill, of Illinois, uncle of Messrs. Jim and Arch Tennill, and a man of sixty-one years of age, ran off and married his sister-in-law, a lady of seventy, and came here to visit his nephews on the bridal trip. We often read of, but rarely meet with, people of that age who run off to get married.

Likes Miss Malott's Letters.

I enjoy Drusie Malott's letters from China, but wonder now any girl can have the religious courage and zeal to brave the distance and danger of going. I met her mother at the Fern Creek Fair this year and we talked of Miss Drusie. I also knew Miss Katie Miller, of Louisville, who is in China, and wish she would write us a letter telling of her work there. I wish for both of them long and useful lives in their chosen field.

Mrs. W. E. Carrithers and baby girl have gone to Valley Station to visit Mr. and Mrs. Hope for a week. Miss Nettie Seacore, of Jeffersonville, is visiting Mr. Burdine and family and will probably remain a month. Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Paris went to King's church Sunday to attend the roll call of the members. They report an unusually large crowd.

Mr. M. G. Boston and family and Mrs. Reese Heady and wife made a pleasant visit recently at the home of Mr. John Heady and family, near Fisherville.

Mrs. Morsey and son, Fred, spent last Wednesday in the city and took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Casey. Most of us thought Bennie was too young to get married when she did but Mrs. Morsey says that had one of the best diners she ever ate. We were so sorry to hear that Miss Maud Miller had the fever and hope she will have only a light attack of the dread disease and will soon be well.

M. G. Boston and son, Guy, are asisting Mr. Howard Smith in putting new sheds around his barn.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Harris entertained Mr. Will Bridwell and wife and Hickman Harris and wife last Sunday.

The ladies of the Springdale Presbyterian church will give an oyster supper and bazaar Friday, Nov. 24, at the home of Mrs. R. R. Laird, at Springdale. Everyone is invited.

The lecture and views on Brazil at Glenview church were much enjoyed by a large crowd, in spite of the rain. The electric lights at the blacksmith shop are in fine running order. As one of our own boys, James J. Laird, installed them, we are doubly proud of them.

We are glad to welcome them as their first appearance has convinced us that they will charmingly add to our jovial, extensive circle. Also in district eleven, we have about a dozen debutants and we heartily welcome them to our midst. Can any other little debutant boast of as many debutants this fall?

"WAY DOWN EAST."

For the seventeenth consecutive visit "Way Down East" comes to the Shubert Masonic theatre, Louisville, for a week's engagement, commencing Monday, Nov. 13th.

This delightful play of life in New England is always hailed with delight by the lovers of the pure and wholesome drama. "Way Down East" is a play of yesterday, today and always. It has human nature and a fragrance that is refreshing in its very homeliness. There is no play on the American stage today that has a former hold on the heartstrings of local amusement seekers than has this offering from the pen of Loti Blair Parker, and year after year it goes through the country winning new admirers and retaining the admiration of those who have been its patrons since the first presentation of the piece.

The atmosphere of the play is clean and wholesome, and to sit through a performance is to find one's self among surroundings that are delightful, and the spectator leaves the theatre at the close of the performance feeling better for having seen it. Types of men and women such as are to be found daily in any well regulated New England hamlet predominate, and their peculiar notions of right and wrong form the pivot of an absorbing interesting story.

Manager Brady has equipped the play with the usual elaborate scenic environment and each year it is sent on the road, fitted with a new investiture that is complete in every detail.

The big snow storm is one of the greatest of achievements in stage realism that has been attempted and is presented in such a manner as to make the illusion complete. As competent a cast as has heretofore been identified with "Way Down East" will interpret the different roles, many of the original members still being with the organization.

The prices for the engagement will be 25c to $1.00 at night. Popular price matinee will be given on Wednesday and Saturday, when the prices will be 25c and 50c for the best seats.

Quarterly Meeting at Cooper's.

The first quarterly meeting of the Jeffersontown charge of the Methodist church will be held at Cooper Memorial church next Saturday and Sunday. EDUCATIONAL Conditions in Kentucky and How To Improve Them.

A Writer For The Jeffersonian Gives A Few Interesting Facts and Urges the People To Do Better Things.

Comparisons are so odious that to read the early history of education in Kentucky is a very doubtful pleasure. When we have acquired the knowledge that for many years Kentucky led the way educationally, founding the first library and the first college west of the Alleghenies, producing men of such mental abilities that Kentucky statesmen molded national policies—it is a terrible reflection on the men of the last generation that the men and the women of the present generation must strive their hardest and best in the effort to redeem our State honor and put Kentucky abroad the times.

For nearly three quarters of a century we have stood still educationally, and with a state of unknown, because undeveloped wealth, we have stood still commercially. States North, East, South and West have so far progressed in both ways that we are truly left a long, lonesome way behind—in the thirty-seventh place in the descending scale of illiteracy, in fact.

In Indiana, with only the width of the river between, they have rural schools such as we have never dreamed of here. While our towns and cities have, for twenty-five years, been improving school conditions until we can be reasonably proud of them, the country schools have been ignored and neglected. Throughout the State, the schools are a disgrace—poorly built, tumble down, badly equipped, with neglected out-buildings and weed-grown yards, they are a sorry spectacle. We cannot stand comparison with any of the surrounding States. Apparently, most anything has been good enough for Kentucky children—Indiana and Ohio demand the best for theirs.

More than half the children of school age in Kentucky do not even go to the schools, such as they are.

Education, which is regarded by the most enlightened minds of all ages as the most important thing in life, ought to be here, as it is in other parts of the country, a real, thorough preparation for living, that is the meaning of the word.

Are we going to continue to be satisfied with what our children get? Are we going to continue to let them go to neglected, unsanitary, unsightly school buildings; to teachers, many of them unfit and untrained for their work? Are we going to continue to elect for trustees men who have no interest or sense of their responsibility? Are we going to continue to feel no personal and social responsibility in this matter? Surely the time has come when men and women—not only fathers and mothers, but all, must realize the terrible necessity of school betterment, and work together to redeem the honor of our State—put her abreast the times and give her children educational conditions equal to the best in the land. It is encouraging to know that there has been a weakening, that we acknowledge the lamentable condition in our state and in our own county of Jefferson.

Let us earnestly, with a realizing sense of the work and the need of it, start here, at home, to improve our school and its work, and use our influence with our neighboring communities. We owe it first to the present generation—to the county and the state. If we have state pride, can we be justified in it by the present conditions? Let us help redeem the honor of our state. It is your privilege and mine: it is your duty and mine. Let us organize school improvement leagues. Let us see to it that the building is a fit habitation for the bodies and the minds of our children; that they are comfortable and sanitary, and that every condition makes for their health; that the rooms are attractive and clean. We all know the effect of association and environment. Let us stop and think for a moment that our children, at their most impressionable age, are spending the greater part of six days out of each week for six months or more, in surroundings that will leave their impress on their whole lives for good or otherwise. Let us start a school library—give them good books to read, and put into their lives something good they probably will not get otherwise. Let us see to it that their teachers are trained and fitted for their position and do not hold it merely because of influence with a trustee. Let us demand the best for our children. They are entitled to it. K. G. S.

CITY NEWSPAPER

VS. COUNTRY NEWSPAPER

What is the difference between a city newspaper and a country newspaper? What do you read the city newspaper for and what do you read the country newspaper for?

These are questions that are given but little thought, but nevertheless they enter into the homelife in a way that is unavoidable. The influence that the city newspaper wields is different from that of a country newspaper. If you compare the city paper with the country paper, you immediately recognize the fact that the great daily stands far ahead of the country weekly in point of size and amount of influence upon the world, but when you think over the matter while you will find that there is a vast difference in the influence or sentiment that is sent out. We have nothing to say against the editorial columns of the great dailies. The majority of them are presided over by men who are doing a great work for the advancement of the nation and, we are glad to state, are fighting for the noble and good things in life. But glance over the news columns, if you will, and you will find that the greatest amount of space is devoted to crime, forces, sports, etc., thus educating the people to believe that there is more of this in life than there is of the better things. Three-fourths of the readers of any newspaper are church members and friends of the church. Yet the average city newspaper serves fifty times as much news for the sporting man, the criminal and scandal lover as for church people. A newspaper, city or weekly, is a business enterprise, its chief business is to print the news; all the news that should be printed, and impartially. The sporting man is as much entitled to the news as the preacher—but no more.

Look over the country weekly, and what do you find? See if more space is given to sports, crime, etc. You will find the majority of county papers fighting for the real interests of the people in general in its editorial columns and in its news columns giving those things a preference that are calculated to uplift, rather than pull down. Many people say, "oh, I take the city paper and do not care for the little country paper." Shame on them! There are many thousands more country weekly newspapers in this country than there are city dailies, and as a consequence they are doing the most good. Every county needs a county paper, as well as a city paper. Both should be read, but if circumstances compel you to give up one or the other you should think twice before giving up the one that is doing more for the good of the country than any other—the little home weekly.

GIVE THE BOYS

AND GIRLS A CHANCE.

Ask any young man of thirty or older the number of opportunities to better himself he has been compelled to pass by on account of a lack of education and you will be surprised when he tells you how many times he could have taken advantage of these opportunities and gone to the top of the ladder of fame and riches if he had had the training in youth. In every man's life there are opportunities for better things in life. The men that are prepared seize these opportunities, but the uneducated, of course, have to stand back and let them go by—sometimes cursing themselves for not having seen enough to prepare themselves while they were young or blaming their parents for criminal neglect. We look about us and see parents permitting their boys and girls to run wild upon the streets, when they should be training them to take up life's difficulties later on and fitting them for the splendid opportunities that are to come their way.

Upon this subject the Springfield Sun gives some valuable information, as follows:

"Schools may not make men and women, but it will always help. Certainly the lack of education and advantages will not make men and women. Because the little log school house with the black benches and two or four black boards has turned out strong men and noble women, it does not follow that they would not have been stronger and nobler and have had better influence for good if they had the better advantages in their youth. Because your hero, perhaps, learned his letters for himself by flickering fire of his wood knots and got most of his learning in the 'School of Hard Knocks,' it does not follow there is no better way of training men. All the evidence agrees that the more of opportunity, the more of success. There can be no into the life of a boy or girl, the better will be his or her chances of success. The worthiest and the most useful type of manhood and womanhood. We believe with Ellert Hubbard, that it is the good thing for a boy to have had the privilege of warming his feet cold mornings on the ground where the cows lay the night before; but we also believe it is good for him to have had the privilege of going to a schoolhouse, made neat and bright and cheerful without and within and of advancing from that schoolhouse to higher institutions of learning where he can breathe the air of academic inspiration, absorb the traditions and ideals of his college, and all that it can give of learning and culture and breadth of thought."

A Buttered Book.

Now the Rev. Mr. Jackson, a Scottish minister and the author of numerous books, succeeded in getting one of his works reviewed by Alexander Russell, the distinguished editor of the Scotsman. It is told by the writer of "Famous Editors."

A member of Mr. Jackson's congregation was an old and valued servant in Mr. Russell's family. When the preacher published his new book he asked this member to bring it under the notice of his master, with the request to review it in the columns of the Scotsman. Glad to be of service to his master, the good woman lost no time in making her wish known to the celebrated editor and next morning she took the "Gospel Roll" beside his breakfast cup.

When at breakfast Mr. Russell took up the book and remarked, with a query visible in his eyes, "Helen, this is an awful dry roll which you have given me this morning."

"Perhaps it is, sir," the servant quickly replied, "but you can butter it well on both sides."

Next morning an excellent review appeared.

Conking and Thurman.

Senator Roscoe Conkling was once addressing the senate in an impassioned manner and seemed to direct his remarks to Senator Thurman. At length the latter got irritated.

"Does the senator from New York," he roared, "expect me to answer him every time he makes a mistake?"

For a moment Mr. Conkling hesitated, and everybody expected a terrific explosion. Then, with an air of exultation, he replied:

"When I speak of the law I turn to the senator from Ohio as the Muslim turns toward Mecca. I turn to him as I do to the English common law as the world's most copious fountain of human jurisprudence."

The usually calm senate broke into a storm of applause, and the Thurman eye moistened a little. The two statements were the best of friends and greatly enjoyed each other's society when "off duty."

A Wreter if Not a Better Man.

A little man in the west of England rushed to the river last summer, swearing loudly that he would drown himself. When he had reached the depth of his waist his wife, who had followed him, seized him by the hair, and then, as a local editor described it, she led him back till he reached a place where the water was about two feet deep, where she pulled him over backward and soured him under and pulled his head up again. "Drown yourself down he went, leaving me to father the brats! (Another plunge.) Get drunk (another soured) and start for the river! (Another dip.) Better use the water in your usual drink (another dip and shake of the head.) I'll turn you to leave me a widow!" After sozzling him to her heart's content she led him out a wreter if not a better man and escorted him into the house and closed the door.

The Gordian Knot.

The famous Gordian knot was made of leather taken from some part of the harness belonging to the chariot of the king of Phrygia. It seems that this knot was so tied that the ends of the leather were not visible, hence the difficulty in loosening it. Many must have tried to untie it, for its fame as "the knot at the end of the world" was great, which declared that the lucky experimenter should be rewarded by the king of Phrygia. Alexander tried his hand and meeting with no better success than the others, drew his sword and cut into the knot until it fell round the ends of it.

lative Race.

Kentucky returned to the Democratic fold in State affairs Tuesday by an old-time Democratic majority.

Ballot returns received yesterday indicated election of the entire State ticket by a majority of over 50,000. The Democrats made almost a clean sweep in legislative races, returns showing that only twenty-five Republicans will sit in the next General Assembly out of a total of 139.

Jefferson county and the city of Louisville were carried easily by McCrory and the entire Democratic Times: An automobile which struck a wagon driven by Louis Haley, of Jeffersontown, at the entrance of Chenoweth Run bridge, fared the worst in the accident. The wagon was heavily loaded and was not damaged. The machine skidded after collision and went into a ditch and was damaged. Haley hitched his team to the automobile and pulled it to the road. The chauffeur drove away without revealing his identity.

Rally Day at Methodist Church.

Last Sunday was celebrated as rally day at the Jeffersontown Methodist Sunday-school. A large crowd was present and a very interesting program rendered. The room was elaborately decorated with flowers, fruit, vegetables etc., which were sent to the Methodist orphan's home in Louisville Monday. A feature of the program was the enrolling upon the Cradle Roll the infants of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Whaley and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Davis while the school sang "Bring the Little Ones to Jesus." Miss Margaret Harris sweetly rendered a solo, and Miss Aileen Hummel delivered a recitation entitled "The Book of Books," which was very enjoyable. Quite a number of new scholars were added to the school, and it is hoped that many more will come in before the year is out. Every member of the church and persons not attending any other Sunday-school are cordially invited to come.

WHO'S TO BLAME?

Some Kentucky School Superintendents Make but $1 a Day.

EVEN PAY OWN POSTAGE

But With These Pitiful Salaries They Get Put Up Bonds as High as $30,000—Average Territory Is a Hundred Square Miles.

Does the blame for school conditions lie at the door of the county superintendents or the people at large?

Many county superintendents receive salaries of $100 a year, and none of them receives more than $1,000. When a man has a salary of $400 he is of necessity forced to do something else or starve to death.

No stream can rise higher than its source. No underpaid man can put energy and thought into his work. In one of the fertile and prosperous counties of Kentucky not many miles from Cincinnati, O. I had an interview with a county superintendent whom I knew to be a "live wire" educationally. My first question was:

"How responsible does the public consider your position?"

"Do you mean as measured by my salary or by the bond I am asked to give?"

"Well, I have to give a bond of $30,000. You see, I have $24,000 to finance through my hands annually to pass out to the forty or fifty schools that are scattered over the county. Besides, the school-houses with their equipment are an investment of about $75,000."

"You say schools that are scattered over the county. How much territory does it cover?"

"This is rather a small county, but my schools that I am forced to visit cover a territory of a hundred square miles, and they are on many kinds of roads. It is quite a proposition to supervise the work of sixty-five teachers in forty-five schools, to say nothing of the office work and the inspection that is necessary for repairs and new buildings."

I was silent for a moment, thinking of the probable salary that would be paid a man to take charge of a business with $55,000 in the plant, spending $75,000 a year running expenses and covering a territory of a hundred square miles. I smiled and asked quietly:

"What salary does this county allow you for your work as county superintendent?"

"FIVE HUNDRED AND TEN DOLLARS."

"Do the county and state allow you an adequate expense account?"

He pulled a pocket notebook from his desk and smiled rather bitterly as he said:

"They do not even pay for the stamper or stationery in my office work. Let me run over this for a moment and show you how it goes. I must keep a horse and buggy or I cannot get about. As this county has never taken over the turkeys I must pay my own toll. If I am far from home in winter time I must stay all night at some hotel. All this makes my expenses for the past year $230. Leaving me at the end of the year $280. That's LESS THAN A DOLLAR A DAY FOR ABSOLUTE WORKING TIME."

"What is the highest salary paid county superintendents in the state?"

"Fifteen hundred, and they are few and far between. There are lots of them on the $400 and $600 basis, and it simply means that the fellow has to die for insurance. Farm a little, take a place in a store, make a living in some way and then use what time he can spare for the schools."

IF SIMPLY MEANS THAT OUR RURAL SCHOOLS ARE NOT MANAGED AT ALL. THEY ARE MORE COMMONLY MISMANAGED.

Education for the mass of the people is an investment and a business proposition. With a carefully educated population a state or a community can move forward in a direct, unswerving way. With an illiterate population the finest country on the globe cannot force them to make good. Brain, trained brains, is the insistent call of the twentieth century. Does Kentucky hear that call?

Business and prosperity follow brains; lawlessness and poverty follow illiteracy. Kentucky will be out of step with the onward sweep of the hurrying twentieth century so long as she allows thirteen children out of every hundred to grow into manhood and womanhood robbed of the divine right of being able at least to read and to write.

In order that Kentucky may occupy a place in the forefront in the matter of education, a movement has been inaugurated for the improvement of county schools.

Indifference due to a failure to appreciate the real value of education is one of the very serious obstacles which have confronted every movement toward a higher standard of educational work. In the last few years greater interest has been exhibited generally over the state, indicating in a decided manner that our people were shaking off the lethargy of the past and were aspiring to place the state on a sound, progressive educational basis.

Every citizen must rejoice over this awakening, and all should now unite in a continuous, earnest effort to atone for neglect of the past. It would be a useless task in view of this growing appreciation of the importance and value of education, to make any argument or submit any extended report in its behalf.

SIGNATURES ON CHECKS.

The Plainer They Are the Less They Appeal to Forgers.

"You ought to sign your check differently," Mr. Blank," said a Chicago bank employee to a depositor whose account runs well up toward $100,000 a year.

"What's the matter with that check?" asked the customer, settled that, as he thought, it should be initiated he didn't know how to draw a check.

"You misunderstand me," said the teller. "The check's all right. It is just referring to your signature. It is just the kind that a forger takes delight in copying. If you will allow me the privilege of saying so, you're liable to meet with loss in that way at any time. Any good penman could imitate it so cleverly you'd hardly know the difference yourself."

"The plainer the signature the less likelihood there is of a crook trying to imitate it," he continued after the depositor had become interested. "In nearly every big forgery of which I ever heard, or in many of them at least, the signature imitated was that of a man who wrote with a flourish or who had some peculiar type of writing that ordinarily would appeal to the eye as hard to imitate. It is a fact that it is a rare occurrence for a big forger to attempt to imitate the signature of the man who writes a plain hand."

"Not long ago I had occasion to tell a friend of mine he stood a chance of having some forger get the signature of his signature, and a few days later he was asked by a bank to inspect a check which had been presented for payment and to which his old style signature was attached. He had changed just in time. The forger had been practically and easily fooled, getting it down 'pat' and had not ascertained that the new signature was being used."—Chicago News.

CAMELS ARE VICIOUS.

They Have Numerous Dislikes, Chief of Which Is Man.

A peculiarity of the camel is his dislikes. "Ladies he has none, save for the minims thorax and, perhaps, for dying. He hates red, and when, years ago, some genious of the British army equipped the squadrons of the camel corps with bright crimson saddles the animals so resented the outrage that numbers of them gave up the ghost in pure disgust."

The camel avails, of course, hates man and sometimes displays his viciousness in no uncertain manner. A dignified and elderly British officer has been seen to foot it all round the camp in blue silk pajamas, with one slipper and a shaving brush, and once pursued by his own animal, with his long neck stretched to the utmost and his savage mouth much too near that sleeping suit to be pleasant. At length a fatigue party was summoned, who, with telegraph poles, young trees, railway ties and such appliances, prevailed upon the beast to desist.

As to mount the camel is said to possess distinct advantages. His gait is comfortable when one has learned to ride him, and for really long journeys, which must perforce be made at a slow pace, he is much less tiring than a horse. Besides, he carries with him all manner of things the rider is likely to need on route—cans of water, in which bottles stand to cool; a writing desk (not necessarily of the office type), but still an efficient substitute; a luncheon basket, rifles, telescopes, a mountain gun, if required, and other useful articles.

Long Arrow Fights.

There was a marvellous archery performance some years ago by Sir Ralph Payne Gallwey on the links at a Tourquet. Shod with a Turkish bow, he covered a distance of 367 yards with his best arrow, thus breaking all records achieved in recent times. This performance, however, seems to have been exceeded with the old national weapon of yew. Needs, a famous archer under Charles I., states that the ordinary range of the bow was from 320 to 400 yards. The longest shot authentically recorded in England is that of a secretary of the Turkish embassy, who in 1784 shot an arrow 463 yards with the wind and a 415 at 415 in the presence of several members of the Royal Turphillie society, who measured the distance and preserved the arrow.—Fall Mail Gazette.

The Usual Motion.

To a Judge at St. Joseph, Mo., an old negro once applied for a marriage license. It was not the province of the judge to issue such a paper; he knew the applicant's history, he asked:

"Ephraim, were you ever married before?"

"Jes' once, judge," was the reply.

"Wasn't that enough?"

"Meble, judge, but I want a new trial."—St. Louis Republic.

Sarcasm by the Way.

"Look out," said the woman with the determined look, "or that dog will bite a piece out of you."

"Well," replied Phlooding Pete, "rememberin' dat handout you passed me last week, I wouldn't be afraid to put your grin in desperate for a change of food."—Washington Star.

SHOCKED THE GUIDE.

Antics of an Irreverent Visitor at the National Capitol.

A big man with a fierce, bristling beard and wearing a long brown slouch hat marched down the main corridor of the capitol, closely followed by a guide at a dog trot. They had inspected statue hall and the rotunda and looked in at the chamber of the supreme court, and the visitor had made no other comment on the sights shown him than to utter an occasional grunt, snort or growl.

"The senate is not in session, sir," said the guide in a shocked voice.

After the visitor had departed the guide sat down on his chair in front of the statue of Daniel Webster and mopped his heated brow.

"That's one kind that comes here," he said to himself, "and I think his style is the hardest to deal with. Called the senate burglars—you heard him—and he kicked at everything else."

I showed him that kind some prepared to kick. They ain't got no patriotism at all, and a United States senator ain't no more to them than a doorknocker. Why, I'm afraid to take men like him into the supreme court. Likely as not they'll say something disrespectful right out loud. Do you know what that one said when I showed him statutory hall? He says, 'Who are all these crooks?' Then he wanted to know how much all them statues cost the government and who got the rakeoff. I told him they were given to the people, and he said that was once when the states put one over."

"You wouldn't think," said the guide, with a sigh, "that patriotic Americans could come here and be so careless about the things they see. They seem to be grudging a dollar to be shown the place where Webster stood when he made his reply to Haynes. I don't know what the country's coming to. I've been a guide here twenty years, but I never thought I'd live to hear the senate called burglars."—Washington Star. Kansas City Star.

LIGHTNING VERSUS STEAM.

Testing the Telegraph in the Early Days of Its Invention.

Years ago, when the electric telegraph was a new idea and a mystery to the masses, there came trouble one Saturday night in the Bank of England. The business of the day had closed and the balances were being struck. There was a deficit of just $100. It was not the money, but the error, that must be found. For the officers and the clerks there could be no sleep until the mystery had been cleared up. All that night and all Sunday a force of men were busy; money was surely gone from the vaults, but no one could discover where.

On the following morning a clerk suggested that a new idea might have occurred in packing for the West Indies some boxes of specie that had been sent to Southampton for shipment. His chief acted on the suggestion. Here was an opportunity to test the powers of the telegraph—lightning against steam, and steam with forty-eight hours the start. Very soon the telegraph asked a man in Southampton, "Has the ship Mercator sailed?"

The answer came back, "Just weighing anchor."

"Stop her in the queen's name," flashed back the telegraph. "She is late!"

Have on deck certain boxes (marks given, weigh them carefully and let me know the result," telegraphed the chief.

This order was obeyed, and one box was found to be somewhere about one pound and ten ounces heavier than its mates—just the weight of the missing sovereigns. "All right. Let the ship go!" was the next order.

And so the house was debited with the $100 and the Bank of England was at peace again.—Harper's Weekly.

Hallucinations of Henbane.

Henbane bears a remarkable reputation for creating the most extraordinary hallucinations. Dr. Houston relates that some monks who ate the roots by mistake for parsley transformed their monastery into a lunatic asylum. One monk rang the bell for matins at midnight, and of those of the community who attended some could not read, others "fancied the letters were running about like ants," and some read what was not in their books. Even the exhalations from these pretty but very poisonous flowers produce these weird effects.—Westminster Gazette.

The Adoration of the Wig.

Wigs were never so popular as in the reign of Charles II. The author of "The Bores and the Dandies" tells us that "when Cibber played Sir Popling Flutler his wig was so much admired that he had it carried to the footlights every evening in a sedan chair, from which it was handed to him that he might put it on his head."

Placing the Blame.

Judge (to burglar on trial)—Have you anything to say, prisoner? Burglar—Yes, your honor. I was only act' on me doctor's advice to take 'some thin' afore gort ter bed.—Boston Transcript.

Trouble in the Air.

Husband—You don't go shopping with Mrs. Neardy any more? Wife—No. The last time we went she was a remnant that I wanted.—Judge.

It's faith in something and enthusiasm in something that make life worth looking at.—O. W. Holmes.

DEADLY MINE GASES.

Their Action Upon the Flame of the Safety Lamp.

The safety lamp, a heavy metal lantern shaped object with a circular globe of heavy plate glass, is the only light other than electricity that can be safely carried into a gaseous mine. The lamps are lit before they are taken into the mine and, in addition, are securely locked, so that no accident or ignorant tampering may expose the open flame to the gases of the mine. Over a small sooty yellow flame which gives a light less bright than that of an ordinary candle are two wire gauze cones fitting snugly inside the heavy globe, and it is through these cones that the flame draws the air which supports it. The presence of black damp, or carbon dioxide, can easily be detected, if not by its odor, by the action of the flame, which grows dim and, if the black damp exists in any quantity, is finally extinguished. While damp, the highly explosive gas which is most feared, has, on the other hand, a totally different effect. In the presence of this gas the flame of the safety lamp becomes pointed, and as the gas grows stronger the flame seems to separate from the wire and an almost invisible gas envelope forms beneath it. If the miner continues to advance into the white damp he will pass through a line in which there are nine parts of air to one part of gas (the explosive mixture), and the lamp will instantly register this explosive condition by a sudden crackling inside the gauze and the extinguishing of the flame. Were it not for the explosion ignited by the flame would sweep throughout the entire workings, carrying death and destruction before it, but by the construction of the safety lamp the explosion confines itself to the limited area within the gauze cone, and unless the lamp is moved suddenly and the flame is dragged through the gauze at the instant that the explosion occurs within the globe it will not extend beyond the gauze.—Atlantic.

SPHERICITY OF THE EARTH.

"Parallax" Bet Against It, and He Lost His Wager.

The straightest canal in the world is in England and runs from Exeter, Cambridgeshire, to Denver, Sluis, twenty-two miles away. It was here that years ago a decisive experiment was conducted to prove the sphericity of the earth. At that time, says "Highways and Byways in Cambridgeshire," a devoted gentleman, who called himself "Parallax," was obsessed with the notion that the globe was a flat disk and used to go lecturing with great vigor on the subject. After a number of lectures he invited questions, none of which was able to shake his belief. When asked, for example, "Why does the hull of a ship disappear below the horizon while the masts remain visible?" he would answer, "Because the lowest stratum of air is the densest and therefore nearest convex object seen through it." Finally he showed his whole-hearted belief in his absurd views by laying a wager that if one would disprove them, the stakes were deposited in the hands of judges, and the trial, under agreed conditions, took place upon the New river as part of the canal is called. Three boats were moored three miles apart, each provided with a cross-staff of equal height. If the earth was spherical the central cross would appear above the other to an observer looking through a telescope leveled from the cross-staff of the boat at either end; if it was flat he would see both the other cross-staffs as one. "Parallax" declared that he did see them so, but the judges unanimously decided against him, and the poor man lost his money.

We're All Actors.

Mme. Alexandra Vliard, the Polish tragedienne, once propounded the following:

"It is a strange thing, but ask a man to mend a rip in his coat.

"No; he is not a tailor.

"Ask another to stop the faucet from leaking.

"No; he's not a plumber.

"Or another to do a bit of cabinet work.

"No; he is not a carpenter.

"But ask any one of the three or all of them to enact a little part in a play and each will smile in friendly confidence and instantly acquiesce.

"But what him act?"

Saintliness Unpopular.

That state of mind which let us call the ignominy of the virtuous is not entirely confined to boys of nine years. I have seen strong men and women, being accused of saintliness, over whose faces passed an expression of mortification and who were made no more complacent the tribute that they were getting to be devils in their old age.—Atlantic.

Lack of Tact.

"That man is about the most tactless person I have ever known."

"I agree with you. He would have no more sense than to ask a barber to subscribe to a fund for the purpose of providing a monument for the inventor of the safety razor."—Chicago Record-Herald.
